Thanks, Stephen.

Let's tentatively plan to meet on the morning of Dec. 18. How about we block off from 10AM to noon for the discussion?

In order to make the session useful, the permit development folks here really would like to have enough time with the BTU information to consider it as they evaluate how to craft relevant permit limits. Therefore, the sooner we can get the BTU stuff the better.

(As for the BTU number that you mentioned was cited in the Sept. 2011 Draft Permit Derminations Document, my colleagues from the permits office said that they believe that figure came from something that had been submitted by one of PSNH's consultants. Not sure what they based it on.)

Mark—Thanks. The 18th works for us. I think our default would be in person, if you can accommodate. I understand that Lynn got a message from Danielle and Damien regarding the BTU issue, and she will be reaching out to them tomorrow (since today is an unexpected holiday). Hoping that gets us close to where you need to be.

Thanks,

Stephen

Hi Stephen –

I wanted to propose some times for a possible follow-up meeting or conference call regarding the Merrimack Station permit development.

As you know, we are still looking for some data from your client and we will want to get that information enough in advance of our next meeting so that we can have some time to review it and factor it into our thinking.

It looks like the two best days for us would be either the morning of Tuesday, December 18 (preferred) or the morning of Wednesday, December 19 (second choice).

Let me know about availability on your end.

Thanks.

- Mark
